CLOSER LOOK: Gave futile chase to Cerro last month but with this inside advantage and weight shift, the rider may elect to dead send and dissuade that key foe right out of the gate; has back sto consider including a pair of appearances at the graded stakes level; see how inside path runners have performed on the card and adjust your opinion.

Has consistent rallying gear but thus far has never been victorious over this inner dirt surface; local workouts are decent but he seems in need of a white-hot pace this afternoon (which may be the case); will need to run a personal best in order to land a major share.

Controlled the pace throughout when claimed last month and, if he clears the inside speed without difficulty today, he can easily repeat; maintains top-notch rider despite the change of barns; can return instant dividends but is bound to be overbet in this case even though the class rise is significant.

Beaten favorite was caught wide on a muddy surface last month, his only effort since October; spots much in the way of experience but may have enough prompting ability to challenge the front-runner before the turn for home; suffered through another wide trip 2 races back in a G2 affair; curious item today.

Confirmed closer is strictly a turf performer and despite turning in a vastly improved half-mile breeze over the training track recently, the cards seemed stacked again him; cannot recommend until he returns to his preferred surface. -Jim Kachulis
